Sai Sha Nature Spots

Embark on a journey to Sai Sha and immerse yourself in the serenity of nature.

- Nai Chung Coast Mangrove
The unique shallow mudflats offer a haven for small marine creatures, with fiddler crabs and mudskippers as frequent visitors, and with lock, even an egret might appear. Beyond observing these lively inhabitants, it's a wonderful chance to teach children about nature, exploring 20 native tree species and Hong Kong's early reforestation initiatives.
- Tang Chau
The small island's appearance shifts with the tides. Arriving just as the tide recedes reveals a long beach stretching dozens of meters, covered in white shells. As the tide rises, the lighthouse and pier perched on distant rocks emerge above the water, creating a striking contrast against Ma On Shan's modern high-rises in the background.
- Sam Pui Chau
In the middle of the water stands a small island with five hills. The three smaller hills clustered at the centre resemble traditional Chinese wine cups, while the two larger hills on either end look like teacups without handles. Along with Wu Chau, symbolising a "bowl of rice", they're collectively known among hikers by the familiar phrase, "Three Cups of Wine, Two Cups of Tea, and a Bowl of Rice".
- Wu Chau
The pebble-shaped Wu Chau is a small island with a highest point of just 39 meters. Only at low tide does the tombolo connecting Wu Chau to Tseng Tau Tsuen emerge, allowing visitors to walk across and explore the island's rocky shores. Along the way, a cape offers a breathtaking 360-degree panoramic ocean view, surrounded by mountains – making it an essential photo spot on the island.
- Ma On Shan
Rising to 702 meters, Ma On Shan's main peak, Ma Tau Fung, stands beside its secondary peak, Ngau Ngak Shan (The Hunch Back), forming a saddle-like shape that gives the mountain its name. Hikers typically reach the main peak by following the trail near distance post M07B on the Ma On Shan section of the MacLehose Trail or by connecting from the Ma On Shan Family Walk to a path through Tu Shau Ngam, leading up to The Hunch Backs.
- Ngong Ping Plateau
From the 400-meter-high grasslands, you can gaze over the entire Sai Kung sea area, taking in sweeping views of Hebe Haven, Inner Port Shelter and Port Shelter, where yachts and sailboats dot the sparkling blue waters like stars – an unforgettable sight. Surrounded by Ma On Shan, Tai Kam Chung, Luk Chau Shan, and Shek Nga Shan, this plateau is a popular spot for picnics and paragliding adventures.
- Three Fathoms Cove Mangrove
Designated as a site of special scientific interest, this area plays a vital role in the ecological cycle. It provides a habitat for shrimp, crabs and small fish, while also serving as a feeding and resting ground for migratory birds. Here, you can find various common mangrove species in Hong Kong, including Kandelia, Bruguiera, Aegiceras, Avicennia, Excoecaria, Thespesia and Luminitera.
- Yung Shue O
This quaint Hakka village offers views over the mangroves and fish farms of Kei Ling Ha. The rivers and streams around Yung Shue O boast rich ecological value, home to rare species like the Spotted Flat butterfly and Black-tipped Percher dragonfly, and protected plants such as Hong Kong Pavetta and Rusty-leaved Twayblade. While paddleboarding, you may encounter stingrays or starfish, and during a break onshore, fiddler crabs will be your companions.
- Sham Chung
Built over 140 years ago, this ancient Hakka village is home to numerous historic buildings, including the Epiphany of Our Lord Chapel. Quaint village houses are nestled among manicured lawns and ponds, making it a favourite destination for picnics, day trips and photos. Savour delicious Hakka cuisine against scenic views framed by royal palm trees.
- Kai Ma Tung
Nestled north of Shek Uk Shan in Sai Kung, this 207-meter-high mountain range stretches northward to Pak Kok Chai, overlooking the Tolo Channel. Originally named "Kai Ma Tong", with "Kai Ma" meaning "then" in Hakka, the peak offers expansive, stunning views. Nearby are two Hakka villages: Lai Chi Chong to the northeast and Sham Chung to the southwest.
- Lai Chi Chong
This historic Hakka village, located in the Tolo Channel between Hoi Ha and Sham Chung, is now part of Hong Kong's UNESCO Global Geopark. The coastal volcanic sedimentary rock layers, formed over 140 million years ago, display a range of colours, including rare pyroclastic rocks, making this an exceptional site for geological study.
